

Open Mind Special Event
CRY HAVOC

After overcoming two years of paralysis and six years in the Army, while battling PTSD, Stephan Wolfert met William Shakespeare on a train. Twenty years later, using Shakespeare's timeless words, Wolfert rides that train again. This time, leading the audience on an interactive journey through Shakespeare and his veterans.

Cry Havoc is a one-person play written and performed by Stephan Wolfert, former US Army Medic and Infantry Officer. This unique show unites veterans with civilians and explores the difficulties that our veterans and their families face. It dramatizes our national crises of how men and women are recruited at a psychologically malleable age and then "wired for war" but at the end of their military service they are not "un-wired from war" or rewired for society.

Wolfert is a tour de force in this seventy-five minute solo-show. And Cry Havoc is a vital, thought provoking, gut-wrenching and shockingly funny evening of finely crafted theater.

This event is generously sponsored by Deborah and Bill Ryan.

Tuesday, May 3

Northwest Auditorium, UCLA

Check-in 6:30 PM Program 7:00 PM

Admission is $10 for members and $20 for non-members.

Parking is available in Sunset Village

For questions email Venusse at vnavid@ucla.edu or call 310-825-8871