

UCLA Disability Studies

Challenging Stigma, Redefining 'Normal'

2017-2018 Jessie Alpaugh Senior Prize in Disability Studies

($2400 – One award or split into two)

The Jessie Alpaugh Senior Prize in Disability Studies was established to recognize annually two graduating seniors who are enrolled in the UCLA Disability Studies minor and have developed an outstanding capstone project that contributes to emerging scholarship in the field and also captures their intellectual passion.

The prize is named in honor of Jessie Charlotte Blackmar Alpaugh, an art history major at UC Berkeley who, during the last summer before her sudden death in 2002, worked at UCLA on an independent studies project that contributed to the foundation of UCLA's Disability Studies minor. At the age of 16, Jessie had suffered a catastrophic series of neurological illnesses that left her a quadriplegic with severe speech, hearing, and visual impairments. Despite these challenges, Jessie thrived intellectually and was admitted to UC Berkeley in 1999 as a Chancellor's Scholar. There she found a vibrant group of scholars who were engaged in developing the interdisciplinary field of disability studies. The disability world was never a "club" that Jessie wished to join—the illness that had threatened her life and left her severely disabled deeply saddened her. However, through disability studies she discovered an amazing academic community that simultaneously challenged her mind, respected her experience, and sparked in her a sustaining passion and purpose.

Jessie would be extraordinarily proud of the UCLA Disability Studies program and would be humbled to learn about the senior prize awarded in her name.

APPLICATION INFORMATION

Amount:

$2,400 (one award or split into two)

Eligibility:

- Graduating senior enrolled in the Disability Studies minor
 - Graduating winter 2018, spring 2018, or summer 2018
- Completed or in progress to complete the minor capstone requirement
 - Capstone courses are either DS 191 or DS 199A and 199B
 - Students enrolled in Spring 2018 DS M166 (in lieu of DS 191) are also eligible to apply

Application Instructions:

1. In a single pdf document, include the following three items:

a) Cover page with the following information:

- Full Name
- Student ID Number
- Enrolled in DIS STD 191, DIS STD 199B, or DS M166
- For Students enrolled in DIS STD 199B, list your Faculty Mentor
- Internship Site

b) A 1-2 page Capstone project proposal covering the following:

- Working title
- Brief explanation of the project
- Impact your project will have on the field of Disability Studies

c) A 500-word response to the following prompt:

- In the coming century, Disability Studies will be the dominant lens through which we understand difference in the world. Please relate your work with the minor and/or capstone research to this statement.

Save the PDF in the following format:

- LastName_FirstName_Application.pdf
- Ex: Block_Gene_Application.pdf

2. Obtain a copy of your unofficial transcript and save it in the following format:

- LastName_FirstName_Transcript.pdf
- Ex: Block_Gene_Transcript.pdf

3. Email both files to the Jessie Alpaugh Senior Prize Committee at Jessie_.t9ti7mvoi4o8wktx@u.box.com. Your application materials will be automatically uploaded to a drive once they are received

4. You will receive a confirmation email for each file when your application materials have been successfully uploaded

Application Deadline:

Monday, May 14, 2018 at 5:00pm

The 2017-2018 recipients will be announced during spring quarter. Winners will also be featured on the Disability Studies website (www.disabilitystudies.ucla.edu) and recognized at the Disability Studies End-of-Year Reception, Friday, June 8, 2018.